INTERNAL

STRENGTHS

- Internal capital knowledge
- Automating process which doesn't exist
- Scalable recession proof solution
- Internal and external ERP
- No upfront cost or platform fees
- Flexible pay for success model
- Hiring company controls budget
- Easy self-serve set up
- Reduces job board and staffing dependency
- Gig economy

WEAKNESSES

- Funding
- Time
- Outsourced development
- Lack of brand awareness
- No fixed costs (unpredictable revenue model)
- Referral technology highly competitive

EXTERNAL

OPPORTUNITIES

- Job boards like Monster.com or Indeed struggle with biz model

- International expansion
- Self-serve model (low touch)
- Data

THREATS

- 1099 recruiters may be in direct violation of full time employer
- Tax implications
- Replication by competitor

Competitive Landscape

Reflik: internet based staffing firm offering placement services at set rates of 10-15% of annual base salary

Indeed Crowd & Indeed Hire: internet based software offering direct placement fees ($1,000-$5,000 fees)

RolePoint: ERP - promotes employee engagement in referral sourcing, improving access to networks, increase passive candidate pool

Roikoi: ERP - promotes diversity referrals

Purple Squirrel: access to employees at top ranking companies globally, candidates gain an exclusive hiring advantage - candidates charged by hour for consultation

Referral Mob: restricted to Boston at this time. Pays “advocate” flat $500 for referring and charges client a variable placement fee

Reppify: San Francisco and India based ERP - matching technology - Internal SaaS model

Boon: ERP, “Turn every employee into a recruiter.” - Internal SaaS model

Zao: US and UK based, placement referral platform, requires monthly fees, client sets placement reward, referrers can share the job and split the fees
